

DEAD MAN'S PRETTY PHOTOS

Faces of Fair Women Looked Upon
William J. McAuliffe as He Expired by Gas.

"WEARY OF HIS CARES."

Pencil sketch made by William J. McAuliffe. The drawing is supposed to represent the young telegrapher overburdened and despondent.

"WAITING FOR THE TRAIN."

Drawn by young McAuliffe, who was found dead by gas. The girl in the picture is thought to have figured in the life of the telegrapher.

VACANT CHAIR.

We shall meet, but we shall miss him:
There will be one vacant chair.
We shall linger to careen him
When we breathe our evening prayer.

"Music written by whom?
605 Summit street, New York."

Verses written on the back of the photograph of a beautiful girl on the bureau of William J. McAuliffe, found dead in his room.

William J. McAuliffe, twenty-four years old, telegraph operator for the Worthington Pump Company in Van Brunt street, Brooklyn, was found dead in bed this morning in the boarding-house of Mrs. E. C. Holmes, 238 Henry street. The room was filled with gas from a little gas-heating stove.

Whether it was accident or suicide is problematical. The young man's friends, when informed of his death, expressed themselves as positive that his death was accidental, but the authorities are in doubt.

McAuliffe engaged a room at Mrs. Holmes's on Sunday and took possession for the first time last night. He arrived about 10 o'clock with a valise. He then went out and returned at midnight. Nothing was heard from him after that until the odor of gas this morning led to investigation and the discovery of his body. He had asked a servant to call him at 7 o'clock this morning.

He had unpacked his valise, and arranged after a fashion the few possessions which it contained. Among these were three photographs of handsome young women, which he stood upon the bureau.

On the back of one of the photographs was written: "Alice Merritt, soprano, 163 Madison street, Brooklyn." Some press notices favorable to Miss Merritt were copied in pencil.

Under these was written: "Malice Kelly, Incognito, The Land of Dreams." This was underscored, and following it

DEAD BABY BACK OF STABLE

Capt. Reynolds's Blarney Plaid
Tiny Corpse with Its Face Crushed In.

Capt. Reynolds, of the Atlantic Avenue Police Station in Brooklyn, who was empowered by Capt. Price, of the Tenderloin, as Chief of the Detective Bureau across the river, reported to-day that one of his men had found the body of a newly born girl baby with its face crushed in, between Schenectady and Utica avenues to-day.

The corpse was on the ground in the rear of a stable. The baby's clothing bore no marks that would lead toward was the single word "Progeny."

On the back of another photograph was written the verses:

The third picture was that of two young women, one sitting, the other standing, with her hand on the other's shoulder. On the back was written: "In memory of 1888."

Several nicely executed pencil sketches were also found among the effects. One of these was the figure of a pretty blonde girl standing at the mouth of a tunnel while a train whirled by. Another was that of a telegraph operator resting his head on a telegraph desk. This is supposed to be a drawing of himself by McAuliffe.

Little can be learned about McAuliffe beyond the fact that he was a light-hearted, merry fellow, and not the sort who would be suspected of a suicidal tendency. Those who worked with him said this morning that they did not believe he had any relatives in the city, but that he has a sister in Poughkeepsie. They said the idea of suicide.

Miss Merritt was at home when a reported called, but her mother said she never heard of McAuliffe and doubted whether he knew her daughter at all. At the Worthington Pump Company it was said that McAuliffe had been employed there for four years. He was an expert telegraph operator and of cheerful disposition, regular in his habits and altogether a young man who found much real enjoyment in life. The members of the firm said that they had investigated the manner of McAuliffe's death and were satisfied it was accidental.

The young man left the hydraulic works in the spirits last evening. At 10 o'clock, when McAuliffe boarded before going to the Henry street house, everybody spoke of him as quiet and companionable and a bit religious.

FRANK MOSS CHAGRINED.

Mazet Report Ignored
His Important Suggestions.

Lawyer Frank Moss, senior counsel to the Mazet Committee, read with interest to-day the report made to the Legislature of the investigation.

Mr. Moss, his friends say, is very much displeased with the Committee's report, because there is no mention of the chief recommendations for reform in the conduct of the city government that were made in his report, and, above all, the name of Richard Croker as the real ruler of New York is not mentioned.

From the same source it was also learned to-day, for the first time, that Mr. Moss had a hard fight to keep the Committee in line until the end. Even the majority wanted to quit early in the investigation. It was only by leading, prodding and punching, Moss's friends say, that he was able to hold the Committee to the end.

"The main points of the Committee's investigation," said Mr. Moss to-day, "are all right, but there is much in my report as counsel to the Committee that is not touched upon—matters that are of the greatest importance to the taxpayers of Greater New York."

"For instance, possibly the greatest evil is the power of the Commissioners of various departments. These men use their power for political purposes, regardless of the people's interests. Every Commissioner is a district leader and the Mayor has absolutely no power over him."

"Now, the Mayor's power of removal should be co-extensive with his term of office. As it is he is absolute ruler—his Commissioner's of his office."

"It is shown by Commissioner Lantry's testimony that the spirit of Richard Croker's testimony is taken literally by the heads of departments."

"All departments are run for the benefit of Tammany Hall and not for the good of the people. Yet the Committee's report does not touch on that point."

BABY CRIED HIM TO JAIL.

Gibbs Objected to Noise and "Hit Mother with His Feet."

An eighteen-month-old baby who insisted on crying and disturbing the peace of the apartment house at 125 Station street is responsible for a suit in the City Court for $2,000 damages and the incarceration in Ludlow Street Jail of one of the complaining neighbors.

The baby belongs to Mrs. Ida Schwartz, who says that Boorish Gibbs objected to the infant's tiny screams, which, it is alleged, after talking about the baby's crying, called on Mrs. Schwartz on Jan. 9 and entered a formal protest. Mrs. Schwartz told Gibbs to mind his own business, that her baby was no worse than other babies.

Later in the day Gibbs again invaded the Schwartz flat and after denouncing Mrs. Schwartz and the baby, assaulted the woman.

In the language of the complaint he "hit her with one of his feet," inflicting serious injuries.

Mr. Schwartz brought suit for $2,000 for assault and Gibbs was arrested and held in $500 bail, in default of which he was sent to jail.

A MOTHER SUPERIOR INDEED

She Had a Helping Hand for an Orphan Girl Who Was in More than a Little Difficulty.

This is the Mother Superior of a well-known Fordham convent. She varied her religious duties by helping a young girl whose great wealth proved a curse.

The girl was Helen Merrington, heroine of "The New York" 30-cent paper, or "What Would You Do with $100,000 a Year?" the thrilling serial which begins in tomorrow's Evening World.
